“Patrick after Olympia and Venus.
Nick Miller, 2011. Oil on linen 182 x 214cm

In this multimedia piece Nick Miller draws our attention to the tradition of the reclining nude in art. Taking his lead from the canon of reclining Venuses from Titian to Manet, Miller replaces the traditional female object of desire with a matter-of-fact male presence, exploring issues of exposure and modesty. The accompanying film, set to ‘Trumpet Vibe Cello Piano’ by Kevin Volans (an internationally-celebrated composer known for his work with artists such as William Kentridge and Jurgen Partenheimer), offers an intimate view of the collaboration between artist and sitter, and the process and practice of applying paint.

Nick Miller is a highly-respected painter, based in Co. Sligo, who exhibits regularly in Ireland, Europe and the USA. This year he showed a large drawing installation at Concord Art Association in Massachusetts and is currently showing in a group exhibition at The Douglas Hyde Gallery entitled Interlude (Aspects of Irish landscape painting). His work, whether in landscape or in portraiture, is always concerned with ‘being there’, his paintings are directly engaged with the presence of the subject. www.nickmiller.ie
